已註解 (T1):

Eric Moussambani was a star at the Olympics in Sydney, Australia in 2000. The swimmer from Equatorial Guinea didn't win a medal, but the crowd loved him.

Eric only started swimming in January, 2000. He was 21 years old. He practiced in a small swimming pool in a hotel. When he saw the Olympic pool in Sydney, he was surprised. It was huge! It was 50 meters long. He couldn't see the other end of it! The pool at home was only 12 meters long.

In Eric's race, there were two other swimmers. But they both jumped in the pool too early and the referee stopped the race. When the race started again, Eric was the only swimmer and he was nervous. Everyone watched him. He started to swim very quickly, but soon he felt very tired. The crowd cheered "Eric! Eric!" This helped him to finish. After the race, Eric was a hero. His time was very slow, but it didn't matter. People thought he was very brave.

In 2016, Eric went to the Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
He didn't swim for Equatorial Guinea. He was the team's coach!
