The recent incident of a landfill site in India catching fire and causing toxic fumes is quite miserable for the residents. The hazardous effects on the health of nearby residents can't be ignored, especially the government! It may take some practical actions to solve the problem. For example, convert those mountains of garbage into available power generation energy. Also, I thought that we should take steps towards proper waste management and reduce our carbon footprint to prevent this kind of trouble.

The current problems are...

Between 2011 and 2021, the suicide mortality rate among adolescents aged 15 to 24 in Taiwan has shown an increase, and causes include cyberbullying, bullying at school, relationships between parents and academic stress, to name a few.

How can we save innocent lives?

According to the first person we asked, When they meet the problems they couldn't solve, they would choose teachers at school first because their parents have not much of time to come, and the teachers have high degree of professionalism.

In summary, teen suicides can stem from family and school problems. From the family side, the family's attention to the child affects the child's willingness to seek help. On the other hand, teenagers interact poorly with their peers at school, causing them to have suicidal thoughts. In addition, they are more inclined to seek help from school teachers.

THE RUSSIAN-UKRAINIAN WAR HAS LED TO A GLOBAL FOOD CRISIS

Russia's invasion of Ukraine and subsequent sanctions imposed on its economy have exacerbated global food prices.

The Russian-Ukrainian war mainly affecting those in poorer countries. The conflict has cut off supplies to Ukrainian ports, which once exported large quantities of cooking oil and grains such as corn and wheat.

We ask two questions about the food crisis:

- 1.The food crisis is mainly due to the inadequacy of prices that make it unaffordable for the population, or to the fact that production is too low due to war?
- 2.If the price of staple foods soars beyond affordability, what food will be substituted?

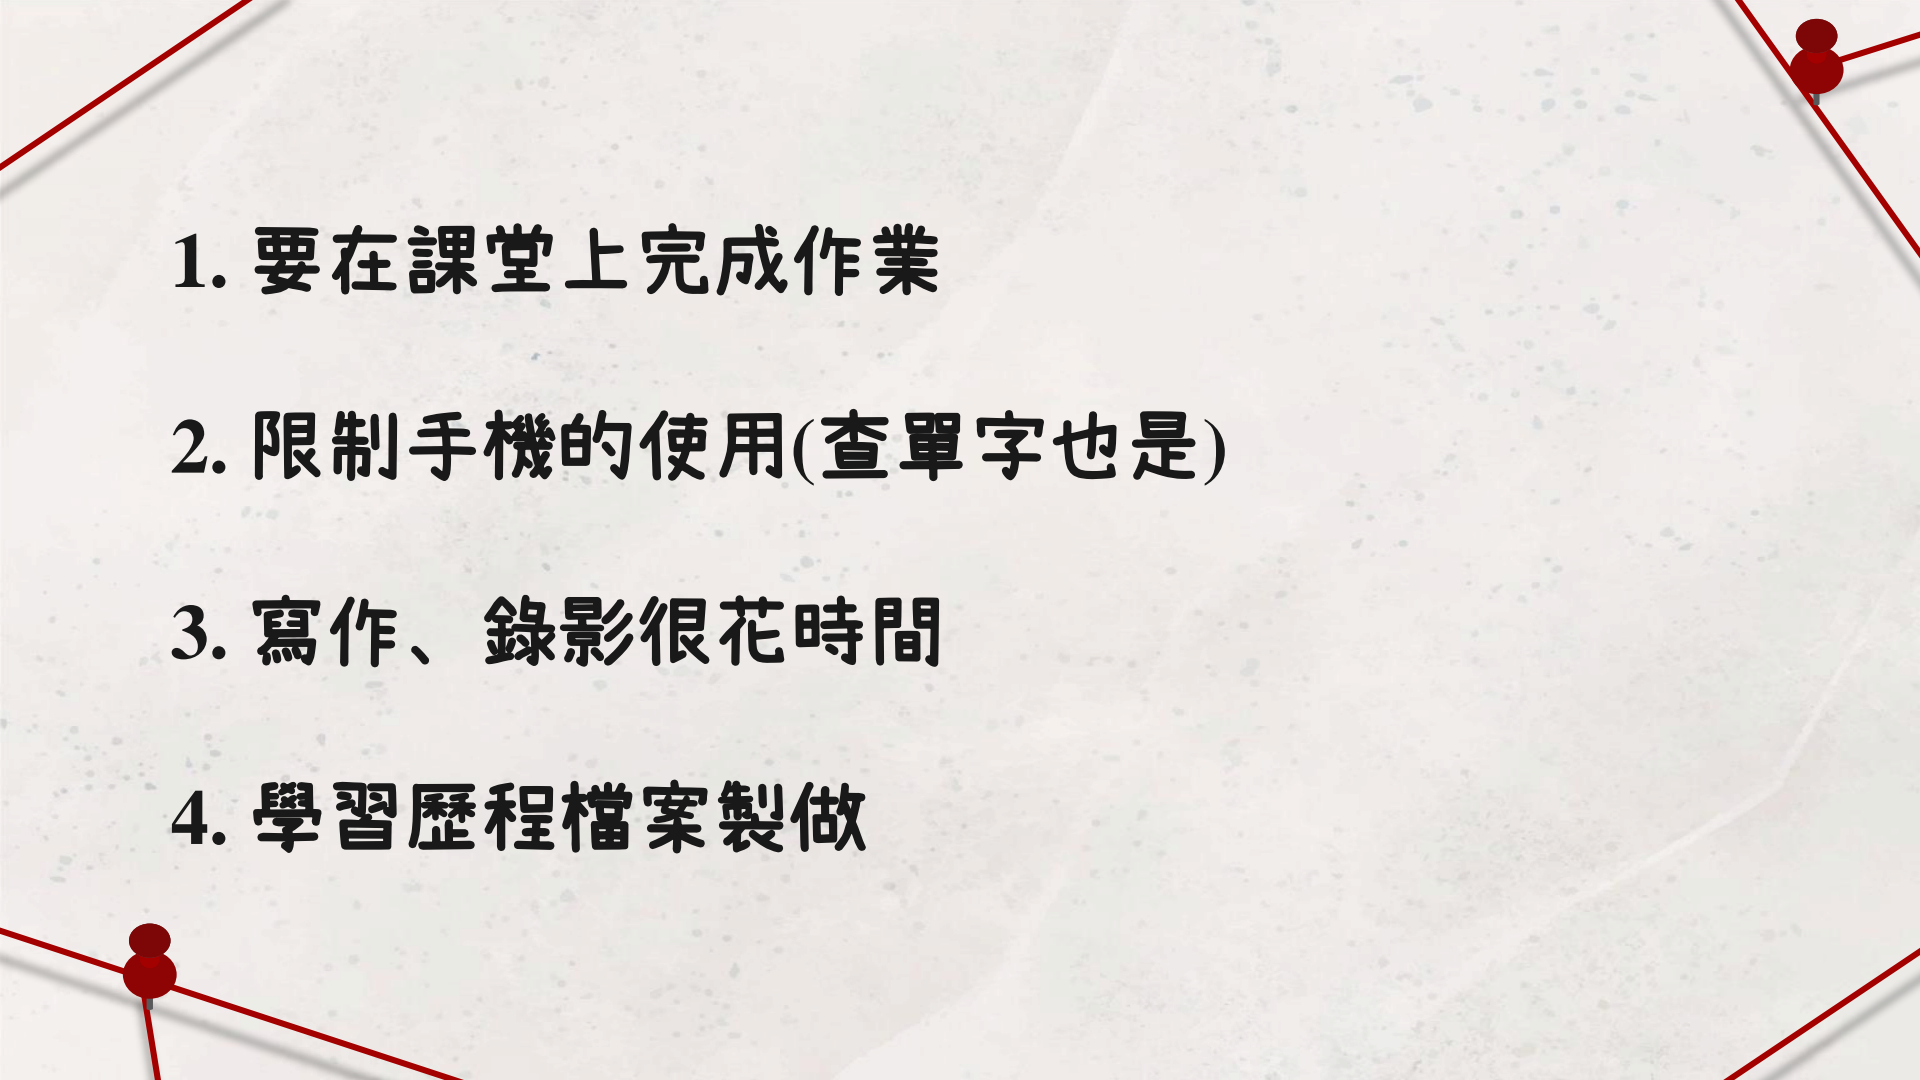

According to respondents' responses, the food crisis is not only due to soaring prices, but also to the lack of production of staple foods. If the price of staple foods soars beyond affordability, crops such as sweet potatoes are chosen as an alternative.

Therefore, we should call on our government to encourage farmers to plant low-priced crops that can replace staple foods by means of subsidies, so as to prevent people from dying of hunger after the price of staple foods soars.
