(3) For most people, sitting is an everyday thing. In fact, many of us spend more than half of our waking hours sitting in a chair. But have you heard that "sitting is the new smoking"? Some studies show that sitting for a long time can be more dangerous than smoking. It can cause heart and weight problems as well as neck and back pains. What's worse, it can even make our lives shorter. Many doctors also say that the best way to stay healthy is to sit as little as possible. A person can lose about nine pounds a year just by standing three hours a day. So, stop sitting there and doing nothing. It's time for you to get up from the chair and move your body!

(5) Lots of parents like to share things about their children. With different social media, parents now tell funny stories about their children and put pictures of them on the Internet. Over 90% of parents have the experience of uploading their children's pictures or videos online. To talk about this phenomenon, people even made the word "sharenting" by putting "share" and "parenting" together.

Sharenting is highly controversial. Some people think there's nothing wrong with it, but some people think it might hurt children in many ways. When parents put those pictures online, they are sharing them with the world because nothing on the Internet is fully private. Second, those pictures belong to (屬於) the children, not their parents. It is not right for parents to put them online without asking their children first. Most kids under 5 years old know nothing about sharenting. However, kids start to have their own ideas about those pictures when they are 6 to 12 years old, and some of them may feel unhappy about putting the pictures online. As for teenagers, most of them point out(指出) clearly: they don't like sharenting because they feel embarrassed about those pictures. Those pictures may be cute to their parents, but not to them or their classmates.

Parents love their children and are usually proud of them, so they like to share pictures of them with others. However, parents should think twice before they do it and care more about their children's feelings when they are putting any pictures online. After all(畢竟), everyone, even a child, has the right to keep his or her photos private.
