

* Still some tiny mistakes to amend!!

Revision Worksheet for Narrative Writing: Comic Strips (1)

Class: _____ Number: _____ Name: _____

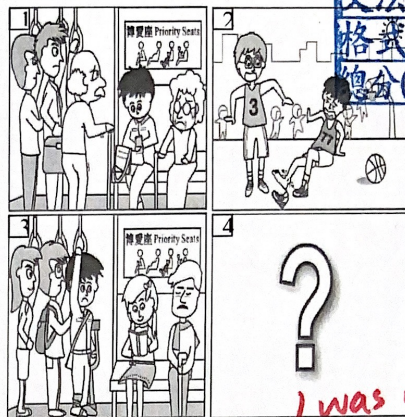

說明: 1. 依提示在下方作答區上寫一篇英文作文。

2. 文長須分成兩段, 至少 180 個單詞(words)。

提示: 請仔細觀察以下三幅連環圖片的內容, 並想像第四幅圖片可能的發展, 寫出一個涵蓋連環圖片內容並有完整結局的故事。

Key information:

- Who were involved in the story?
- Where and when did the story occur?
- What happened to the characters in the story?
- How did they response to this situation?
- Why do you tell such a story?

結構(5)	4
內容(5)	4
單字(4)	3
文法(4)	3
格義(2)	1.5
總分(20)	15.5

warm-hearted
(heart-warming)

Not Upp!! warm-hearted incident that I would never forget. It all started when I got on the MRT, I looked around to find any available seat so that I could sit down comfortably and play on my cellphone leisurely. Three minutes later, I finally found an available seat near an old lady who had curly white hair, a pair of big glasses, and a crutch. Nevertheless, ~~in spite of a priority seat, I still~~ ^{holding} it was a priority seat, but I still decided to take it. While I was ~~so~~ ^{deeply} immersed in watching an appealing anime on my phone, an elderly weak man got on the MRT. His face looked pale, not feeling well, ~~(too)~~ ^{in the meantime}. Furthermore, his legs seemed to be trembling. In the beginning, I just wanted to ignore him and keep watching anime, ~~(but)~~ ^{kept} he stood in front of me and looked at my seat with agony. His constant stare made me embarrassed and even started to have a sense of guilt, so I yielded my seat for him. He smiled and showed gratitude to me. Later, the MRT arrived at the station, so I got off it and ~~walked~~ ^{rushed} to school. In the school, I terribly sprained my ankle when I was playing basketball in PE class, and I was immediately taken to the health center. What's a terrible day!

In the next morning, I felt ~~(too)~~ ^{too} painful to walk, so I had no choice but to carry a crutch to school. I hobbled arduously and got on the MRT. I was so helpless because all the seats were occupied. As a result, I could just stand in the crowd and endured suffering in silence. In front of me was a student with long straight hair who sat on a priority seat. It seemed that she was attentively reading her novel ~~(that)~~ ^{so} she didn't notice me, let alone my adversity. Much to relief, later, she raised her head and saw me. She just made way for me immediately without a second thought. What she had done to me deeply touched my heart. From this incident, I realized that a small action could make someone's day. (363)

AL 3/26.

* Still some tiny mistakes to amend!!

Revision Worksheet for Narrative Writing: Comic Strips (1)

Class: _____ Number: _____ Name: _____

說明: 1. 依提示在下方作答區上寫一篇英文作文。

2. 文長須分成兩段, 至少 180 個單詞(words)。

提示: 請仔細觀察以下三幅連環圖片的內容, 並想像第四幅圖片可能的發展, 寫出一個涵蓋連環圖片內容並有完整結局的故事。

結構(5)	4
內容(5)	4
單字(4)	3
文法(4)	3
格義(2)	1.5
總分(20)	15.5

Key information:

- Who were involved in the story?
- Where and when did the story occur?
- What happened to the characters in the story?
- How did they response to this situation?
- Why do you tell such a story?

warm-hearted
(heart-warming)

In retrospect of my junior high school life, I still remember that there was an warm-hearted incident that I would never forget. It all started when I got on the MRT, I looked around to find any available seat so that I could sit down comfortably and play on my cellphone leisurely. Three minutes later, I finally found an available seat near an old lady who had curly white hair, a pair of big glasses, and a crutch. Nevertheless, ~~in spite of a priority seat, I still~~ ^{holding} it was a priority seat, but I still decided to take it. While I was ~~so~~ ^{deeply} immersed in watching an appealing anime on my phone, an elderly weak man got on the MRT. His face looked pale, not feeling well, (too). Furthermore, his legs seemed to be trembling. In the beginning, I just wanted to ignore him and keep watching anime, but he stood in front of me and ~~looked~~ ^{pretended} at my seat with agony. His constant stare made me embarrassed and even started to have a sense of guilt, so I yielded my seat for him. He smiled and showed gratitude to me. Later, the MRT arrived at the station, so I got off it and ~~walked~~ ^{rushed} to school. In the school, I terribly sprained my ankle when I was playing basketball in PE class, and I was immediately taken to the health center. What's a terrible day!

Not Upp!!

In the next morning, I felt too painful to walk, so I had no choice but to carry a crutch to school. I hobbled arduously and got on the MRT. I was so helpless because all the seats were occupied. As a result, I could just stand in the crowd and endured suffering in silence. In front of me was a student with long straight hair who sat on a priority seat. It seemed that she was attentively reading her novel ~~that~~ ^{so} she didn't notice me, let alone my adversity. Much to relief, later, she raised her head and saw me. She just made way for me immediately without a second thought. What she had done to me deeply touched my heart. From this incident, I realized that a small action could make someone's day. (363)

Getting to school seemed like a long and tough journey to me.

AL 3/26.